

LINDA BERGHOFF BIO

Linda Berghoff has graduate degrees in arts administration from Drexel University and Tyler School of Art, Temple University (BFA/MFA). She has taught fine arts at St. Petersburg College in Florida and Newbury College in Boston, Massachusetts. She has received awards in printmaking as well as two visual arts grants.

Berghoff has experienced the visual arts from many viewpoints. She is an art educator and an exhibiting artist. She has been a gallery assistant/curator and worked with artists in a collaborative print workshop (BERGHOFF-COWDEN EDITIONS) and has initiated and curated print projects and exhibitions that traveled nationally and internationally.

One exhibition in particular that Berghoff participated in was the result of an idea she had as a MFA graduate student studying in Rome, Italy, in which she wanted to create an artistic and cultural exchange with Italian artists similar to what she had experienced as an exchange student.

In addition to lecturing and teaching, Berghoff is an active participant in educational and artistic collaborations with museums and art organizations. She recently moved to Santa Fe, New Mexico where she hopes to continue her work as an artist investigating the Southwest.